THE OLD WEST

Your Summer Guide To Buying Native American Art and Artifacts, Fine Western Art and Western Americana
Collecting Edward S. Curtis

Knowledge Is Key When Pursuing Works By The Eminent Photographer

By Christopher Cardozo

Curtis scholar, author and internationally recognized collector

Knowledge is key when building a collection of works — especially those by an internationally acclaimed American icon. Born in 1868, Edward S. Curtis was a highly prolific and award-winning photographer. In total, he created more than 40,000 to 50,000 negatives of North American Indians and at least 10,000 to 20,000 studio portraits, landscapes, Gold Rush and Harriman Expedition photographs.

Yet, as Curtis has gained ever-increasing acclaim, the reprints, reproductions and fakes make it critical that a collector be well informed. Distinctions must be made between vintage prints, later original prints and posthumous prints. Experts specializing in Curtis often prove invaluable in this identification process.

The following is a brief introduction to the unusually wide variety of photographic processes Curtis employed.

Platinum Prints

In addition, Curtis created a significant body of platinum prints (comprising 0.25–0.5 of one percent of his extant body of work) that vary in size. Varying paper weights and surfaces were employed. Approximately 400 to 800 negatives are estimated to have been printed as platinum prints, but possibly as few as 200 negatives were printed as finished exhibition or sale prints. Generally, there are fewer than four or five prints per negative. Several of the most popular images are estimated to have 40 to 80 examples in existence in platinum in various sizes.

Silver Prints

Other works include silver prints, of which the most frequently encountered are called goldtones (or “orotones” or “Curt-Tones”). Like platinum prints, these comprise approximately 0.25–0.5 of one percent of Curtis’s extant work and vary in size. Experts estimate that Curtis printed approximately 60 to 70 of his negatives as goldtones. Curtis’s individual goldtone image range from unique to probably more than 500 impressions for The Vanishing Race. Size and potential damage play a large role in valuations. For example, goldtones measuring 18 by 22 inches are extremely rare and desired by many a seasoned collector.

Curtis also created gelatin silver paper-based prints for sale and/or for exhibition purposes. These are virtually always sepia-toned and are rarer than platinum prints or orotones. The small body of warm-toned gelatin silver prints that also exist — incorporating a barely discernable screen pattern — are often confused with platinum prints. Another group comprises the untoned, gelatin silver “reference prints,” featuring a semigloss or glossy surface and printed on single-weight paper.

More than 1,000 negatives of un-toned silver “reference” prints survive, although most of these are among the archive originally filled with the United States Copyright Office. For toned silver prints, it is estimated that prints from several hundred negatives exist, but generally only one to five prints exist from any individual negative, although a few of the most popular images are probably higher. A small number (probably under 100) of toned silver prints were created as “border prints.” These are quite scarce, with generally only one or two prints per negative.

In terms of rarity and extreme collectibility, gold-toned printing-out paper prints are highly desired. These collodi-on silver prints, on single weight paper, are a printing-out process and gold-toned. They are extremely rare and were produced principally in 1899 and 1900. Marked by their fine grain structure, these prints feature sharp resolution and rusetty sepia tone.

Cyanotypes

Curtis also created a large body of cyanotypes (blue-tinted, printing-out process prints). These were made in the field contemporaneously with the creation of negatives and, presumably, virtually all 40,000 to 50,000 negatives were initially printed as cyanotypes. Of these, however, only a few hundred appear to have survived.

Hand-Colored and Experimental Prints

Additionally, Curtis created a small body of hand colored gelatin silver and platinum photographs using watercolors and oils, as well as experimental prints that appear to employ a gum process and/or ink. Hand colored and other experimental prints are extremely rare and generally unique. A small body of Curtis’s lantern slides still exist, some hand colored. Lastly, Curtis created blue-toned gelatin silver prints, which should not be confused with his cyanotypes.

Availability and Pricing

Availability and pricing of existing prints can vary greatly depending upon image, medium, size, print quality and print condition. Many nongravures are unique and come on the market only once every ten to twenty years, if at all. Most photogravures, of which approximately 80 to 90 impressions of each image have become available individually over the past century, can generally be located and purchased within weeks or a few months. However, the more valuable photogravures have become increasingly difficult (and expensive) to source.

Photogravure prints range from very low in price for the least desirable to very high for the most desirable. Smaller, volume-size photogravures generally range in price from very low to moderate, with the smaller print of Chief Joseph commanding moderately high prices (approximately $15,000 to $20,000). Larger photogravures are typically in the low to moderate range but can in some cases range from high to very high ($80,000 to $90,000). Non-goldtone silver prints and goldtones range from low to high or very high in price for extremely rare and desirable examples. Cyanotype prints range in price from low to moderate. Goldtones range in price from moderate to very high for extremely rare and desirable examples. Porphous original prints and reproductions have been, and continue to be, produced. Expert opinion may be required for proper identification. As any Curtis collector knows, learning begets learning, yielding a deepened joy and understanding of Edward Curtis, his works and the contributions of his Native co-creators.
Seeking consignments for our annual auctions

Cowboy and Indian artifacts
Fine Western art

Edward Borein, Watercolor
Sold $138,000

Billy the Kid Tintype
Sold $2,300,000

Blackfoot Man's Shirt
Sold $109,250

Dixie Thompson's Loomis Saddle
Sold $195,500

Custer Battlefield Sharps Rifle
Sold $258,750

Demuth Cigar Store Indian
Sold $28,320

Annie Oakley Lithograph
Sold $57,500

E. I. Couse, Oil on Canvas
Sold $141,600

Goldberg/Staunton/Estrada Spurs
Sold $40,250

Specializing in authentic fine art and artifacts of the American West. Old West Events is home to the January and June Old West Shows, featuring the finest national dealers in Western art, antiques and design. We also offer appraisal and consulting services, as well as private treaty sales and acquisitions. Single items or collections welcome.

Next Auction: January 20, 2018, Mesa, AZ

Submit items for review:
OldWestEvents.com/Sell
Or call 480-779-9378
This year marks the centennial of the death of the man the world came to know as Buffalo Bill. The scout, hunter and, above all else, showman was acclaimed for the Old West performances he staged throughout the United States, Great Britain and Europe. He continues to be a leading man at auction, as a sale staged in Fort Worth, Texas, on June 10 by Old West Events impresario Brian Lebel confirmed. Lebel’s Old West Show and Sale featured seminars on Buffalo Bill and the Wild West era by Steve Friesen, director of Buffalo Bill Museum and Grave in Golden, Colo. Born February 26, 1846, in the town of Le Claire in Iowa Territory, William Frederick Cody learned early how to fend for himself. Eleven when his father died, he worked as a Pony Express rider and fought for the Union in the Civil War. After the war, the US Army employed him as a civilian scout during the Indian Wars. Putting his frontier experience to good use, Cody made his stage debut in 1872 in a Wild West theatrical produced by Ned Buntline. By 1883, Cody had his own show, Buffalo Bill’s Wild West. The presentation helped make him a global celebrity. After a colorful life and storied career that included his own exhibition at the 1893 Chicago’s World’s Fair, Cody died in Denver at age 70 on January 10, 1917. “Buffalo Bill” Cody is remembered in literature as diverse as his own 1879 memoir The Life and Adventures of Buffalo Bill and Larry McMurtry’s 1990 book Buffalo Girls. In the late 1800s, more people could identify the star than could point out the Queen of England.

Lebel has handled many different genres of Western collectibles, but artifacts associated with Buffalo Bill and the Wild West era are among his favorites. The founder and director of Old West Events says, “One of the things many people don’t know about Bill Cody is that he was not just a showman. He was a true frontiersman. First he lived the Wild West, and then he took it to the world. He wasn’t just putting on a show, he was recreating history.” Featured in Old West’s June 10 sale was “The Red Fox,” a lithograph of 1893. Made to pair with the poster of Cody called “The White Eagle,” it is considered one of the most carefully printed and highest quality of the Buffalo Bill posters. Printed by A. Hoen & Company of Baltimore and housed in a vintage oak frame, the 34-by-28-inch work realized $14,160.

An original photograph of Buffalo Bill’s Wild West cast in New York by Emil J. Kraemer, Auburn, N.Y., circa 1887–88, realized $4,720. Iron Tail, William F. Cody and Louisa Cody appear front and center. The image by Emil J. Kraemer of Auburn, N.Y., has the photographer stamp on verso and dates to circa 1887–88. From the estate of record producer Thomas Leslie “Snuff” Garrett (1938–2015), two very scarce early souvenir felt pennants realized $1,888. One pennant, with blue and white lettering and a brown buffalo, was for the 101 Ranch. The other pennant bears the name “Buffalo Bill” and the color image of W.F. Cody.

Last, a fine revolver or pistol bit marked with the Anchor Brand crossed the block at $1,888. The signature “W.F. Cody” is cast on the side of the firearm made for many years by North & Judd with Buffalo Bill Cody’s permission. After the entertainer’s death, his family in 1917 sued to halt the manufacturer. The pistol continued to be made after 1917, but without Cody’s signature. A note to readers: “Buffalo Bill’s Wild West Show” is a misnomer. Buffalo Bill hated the word “Show.” If you pay attention to the lithographs, advertisements and other ephemera of the era, you will see it is always referred to as “Buffalo Bill’s Wild West.” The word show is not present.

Brian Lebel has been in the Western Americana business since opening his Old West Antiques gallery in Cody, Wyo., more than 30 years ago. He spent his childhood on the East Coast, but as a young man made his way to Wyoming to try life as a cowboy, which he loved. Lebel developed a fascination with, and an appreciation for cowboy trappings. The first time someone paid him $300 for a pair of Crockett spurs, he was hooked. He still owns the first pair of spurs he ever bought. Promoter, auctioneer, appraiser and consultant, Lebel heads to Mesa, Ariz., on January 20–21 with his own “Wild West” troupe for his annual High Noon Show and Auction.

For additional information, www.oldwestevents.com or 480-779-WEST (9378).
On The Trail Of Thomas Molesworth

Debra Sherman of Dancing Wolf Gallery Describes A Serendipitous Discovery

By DEBRA SHERMAN

While talking with a man at a garage sale several years ago, the conversation turned to cowboy and Indian artifacts, history and ranches. This fellow had one very nice spur for sale and I, in jest, asked, “So any guess where the other spur is?” He told me about an old bunkhouse on a ranch in Wyoming where he thought it might be.

“So what else is in this bunkhouse?”, I asked.

“Mostly cows and critters. Also, some of that old burlwood furniture,” he responded.

My ears perked up right away. “Any chance I can go take a look?”, I asked.

“Sure can, but you’ll have to chase out varmints,” he said.

My husband and I drove a day and a half before finding the bunkhouse. It was beyond dilapidated, with the porch falling in, no door and the roof almost gone. Inside, the trash and manure was knee deep. As we looked in, my husband said, “Well, this was a wasted trip.”

“No it wasn’t… I’m looking at Thomas Molesworth furniture,” I responded excitedly.

Made in Cody, Wyo., in the middle decades of the Twentieth Century, furniture by Thomas C. Molesworth (1890–1977) became a lodge and ranch favorite throughout the years. Many wealthy customers admired Molesworth’s uniquely Western designs. Molesworth furniture could be found in Cody’s TE Ranch, which once belonged to Buffalo Bill. The Rockefeller ranch in Jackson, Wyo., given to Grand Teton Park by Laurence S. Rockefeller in 2001, was also furnished with this “high-style” Western furniture, as were many other grand private estates and elegantly rustic hotels.

My husband and I pulled out a sofa and chair with little cloth and leather upholstery remaning, but with very good bones. Very good indeed. Surprisingly, neither of us caught hantavirus from all the mouse and rat poop on and under the furniture. After having the two pieces restored to their original beauty, we sold them for a very tidy profit.

The moral of this story is that just talking to people at a garage sale can bring you great adventures, future stories to tell and some spending cash. And, no, as hard as I looked through the rooms full of trash, I never did find that other beautiful spur.

Dancing Wolf Gallery, specializing in fine American Indian and cowboy art, is at 24295 North Elbert Road in Elbert, on Colorado’s eastern plains. For information, www.dancingwolfgallery.com or 303-648-3611 or 303-909-2724.

American Indian Art From The Fenimore’s Thaw Collection At The Metropolitan Museum

A selection of 38 works of art created by Native North American artists is on view in Gallery 99 at the Metropolitan Museum of Art through October 8. Drawn from the more than 870 pieces assembled by philanthropists Eugene and Clare Thaw, “American Indian Art from the Fenimore’s Thaw Collection” attests to the longstanding excellence of the aesthetic traditions of North America’s Native peoples. Spanning the first millennium to the Twentieth Century, it showcases indigenous masterpieces from California and other sea-mammal parks) made of seal or other sea-mammal gut from the Arctic region. The exhibition features a variety of Native art forms, including an ancient Arctic carving made of sea mammal ivory, examples of the dramatic sculptural arts of the Pacific Northwest, painted ceramics and weaving from the millennia-long tradition in the Southwest, refined basketry from California and the Great Basin, iconic pictorial narratives chronicling events of the Plains and robust aestheticized weaponry of the Eastern Woodlands. The impressive achievements of female basket weavers from California and the Great Basin region are evident in an award-winning basket made by the renowned practitioner of that art form, Lois Keyser (or Dat So La Lee); a signature work by her sister-in-law, Scees Bryant Possock; and by the Yokuts weaver Mrs Dick Francisco, a monumental woven gambling tray made for a dice game called luuushuai.

Also of great emphasis in this selection of Fenimore holdings is a collection of several singular Plains Indian creations, the most notable of which is a rare Nineteenth Century war record memorializing a battle between the Lakota and Crow (Apsáalooke). A landmark intact ledger book by the artist Black Hawk (Sana Arci Lakota) is a treasure trove of information about life on the Plains; it illustrates hunting and dance scenes and includes natural history drawings and numerous depictions of warfare and ceremony.

The museum is at 1000 Fifth Avenue in New York City. For more information, www.metmuseum.org or 212-535-7717.

In 2013, Christie’s auctioned a selection of Molesworth furniture commissioned by Maes Aumenberg (1877–1942) for Ranch A, his estate in eastern Wyoming. From that commission, this circa 1933 chair brought $9,375 at the sale. Photo courtesy Christie’s.

William Gollings 24” x 18” Oil
SOLD FOR: $414,400

Bert Phillips 24” x 20” Oil
SOLD FOR: $322,000

RECORD BREAKING RESULTS
FOR CONSIGNORS!
NOW ACCEPTING CONSIGNMENTS FOR OUR APRIL 7, 2018 AUCTION
The Potomack Company staged its February 28 sale to evoke Retha Walden Gambaro's gallery, a source for her work and that of other Native American artists.

“may have set the base for future market pricing” of Maine Antique Digest of the Potomack Company's sale East Coast version of the Old West.

sculpting studio, transforming the auction house into an based in Alexandria, Va., recreated Gambaro's rural Potomack, an auctions, appraisals and estate sales firm along with tools and other artworks from her studio. Numerous iconic pieces from her extensive collection Native American art world at her gallery by auctioning numerous iconic pieces from her extensive collection along with tools and other artworks from her studio. Potomack, an auctions, appraisals and estate sales firm based in Alexandria, Va., recreated Gambaro's rural sculpting studio, transforming the auction house into an East Coast version of the Old West.

As reporter Walter C. Newman wrote in the May issue of Maine Antique Digest, the Potomack Company's sale “may have set the base for future market pricing” of Gambaro's works. Potomack's owner, Elizabeth Wainstein, notes that 95 percent of the sculptures were sold to new collectors of the artist's work.

With the success of the Gambaro sale, the Potomack Company is poised to expand its sales of work by modern Native American artists such as those represented by the Via Gambaro Gallery. Among these artists are Kevin Red Star (Crow, b 1943), Larry Desjalais (Chippewa, b 1945) and Kevin Brown (Pamunkey).

“Because of the excitement generated by our Gambaro auction, Potomack is actively seeking consignments from Native American artists represented by Retha's gallery as well as work by other major American Indian artists,” says Wainstein.

The consulting specialist for Native American art at the Potomack Company is Linda Dyer, a nationally recognized appraiser of Native American art and ethnographica. Dyer is well known to fans of PBS’s Antiques Roadshow.

The Potomack Company's offices are at 1120 North Fairfax Street in Alexandria. For more information, www.potomackcompany.com or 703-684-4550.
Why Collect Antique Native American Art?

By Toby Herbst

I am sometimes asked, as a person of Western European background, what first compelled me to collect Native American art. The simple answer is that I find the art both beautiful and fascinating. The more complex response includes many factors. First, Native American artifacts are part of our shared American history. They, like many antiques, are a touchstone to other’s material culture and exchanged artifacts. Granting this, this has not always been to their mutual benefit, but, at least in modern times, some of these iniquities have been addressed. When collected with respect, these artifacts should be enjoyed by all people, who may learn by looking, and whose knowledge may deepen into understanding. How sad and sterile a world it would be if we could only look at and enjoy art made solely by our own culture, ethnic group or religious persuasion.

Accepting Quality Consignments

John Moran Auctioneers is now seeking consignments for a special September Western and Native American Decorative Art Auction. Fine art, jewelry and decorative objects are all invited, to inquire regarding consignment, contact John Moran Auctioneers via telephone: (626) 793-1833 or email: info@johnmoran.com.

Record prices - Free Valuation - Quick Payment
Two back-to-back shows in Santa Fe, N.M., this August bring together an extensive collection of historic to contemporary material. The dazzling assortment ranges from fashion, jewelry, furniture and books to tribal, folk and American Indian art; works on paper and canvas; and three-dimensional pieces in wood, ceramic and bronze. The range is vast and the selection is discerning. By showcasing the most renowned art dealers in one of the West’s most celebrated cities for art, show producers Kim Martindale and John Morris have created two world-class destination events.

Objects Of Art Santa Fe

The eighth annual Objects of Art Santa Fe opens with a gala preview on August 10 and continues through August 13 with an irresistible melding of the best of historic and contemporary art and design. This is the city’s favorite summer destination for unique, one-of-a-kind works of fine and decorative art from around the world. The presentation features more than 70 gallery owners and other exhibitors presenting thousands of choice objects handmade by master artists and designers in a range of media. Prices start at $25 and range into the six figures.

With an eye toward international design trends, the emerging interest in global ethnographic materials and the eclectic tastes of young collectors, this show assembles treasures spanning place and time to give Objects of Art Santa Fe a unique niche. “People’s interests have become quite eclectic. That’s what we’re aiming for,” says co-producer Morris.

Antique American Indian Art Show

Following the close of Objects of Art, the 4th annual Antique American Indian Art Show kicks off with a gala preview on August 15. The fair, the most anticipated presentation of historic Indian art of the summer season, continues through August 18 with 70 knowledgeable experts in pre-1950 American Indian textiles, pottery, jewelry, basketry, beadwork, woodcarving and other arts.

The largest show of its kind follows the city’s centuries-old tradition of trade. Rich in work by Southwestern pueblos and tribes, the fair also represents the cultural and geographical diversity of indigenous peoples throughout the United States and Canada. It provides an informed historical perspective on the contemporary expressions of contemporary Native American art, the focus of Santa Fe’s renowned Indian Market August 19 and 20.

“We have attracted the major traders in the field who have the best available material in the world,” says co-producer Martindale. “The room is full of people who know the art historical side of these works”

New this year to Objects of Art Santa Fe and the Antique American Indian Art Show are designer showcases presented by THE, Santa Fe’s magazine of arts and culture. The inspiring installations will be rich in ideas for using historic art and one-of-a-kind pieces in a modern interior.

Benefiting New Mexico PBS, Object of Art Santa Fe and the Antique American Indian Art Show Santa Fe take place at El Museo Cultural de Santa Fe, 595 Camino de la Familia in the Santa Fe Railyard. For information, www.objectsofartsf.com.
Charles M. Russell (1864–1926)
Approach of the White Men
Oil on canvas, 24 x 34 inches
Est.: $1,500,000–2,000,000

Thomas Moran (1837–1926)
The Rio Virgin, Southern Utah
Oil on canvas, 20 x 16 inches
Est.: $600,000–900,000

Frank Tenney Johnson (1874–1939)
Return from the Hunt
Oil on canvas, 25 x 30 inches
Est.: $250,000–350,000

Clark Hulings (1922–2011)
Bolos Rendezvous
Oil on canvas, 30 x 36 inches
Est.: $60,000–90,000

William R. Leigh (1886–1955)
Yid-Bin
Oil on canvas, 28 x 22 inches
Est.: $250,000–350,000

Philip R. Goodwin (1883–1935)
Mass Hunter
Oil on canvas, 25 x 36 inches
Est.: $100,000–150,000

Oscar Berninghaus (1874–1952)
First Shots on Two Mountains
Oil on canvas, 20 x 24 inches
Est.: $60,000–90,000

Tom Lovell (1909–1997)
U.S. Dragoons in Texas, 1851
Oil on board, 19 x 32 inches
Est.: $80,000–120,000

Edgar Payne (1883–1947)
Desert Sky
Oil on canvas, 25 x 50 inches
Est.: $100,000–150,000

Charles M. Russell (1864–1926)
Moose Hunter
Bronze, 10 inches high
Est.: $200,000–300,000

George Catlin (1796–1872)
Mass Hunt (1863)
Oil on board, 16 x 21 inches
Est.: $60,000–90,000

Kenneth Riley (1919–2015)
Rendezvous
Oil on board, 48 x 44 inches
Est.: $80,000–120,000

Frank McCarthy (1924–2002)
The Long Rendezvous (1975)
Oil on board, 24 x 36 inches
Est.: $60,000–90,000

E. Martin Hennings (1886–1956)
Furnace Canyon (circa 1938)
Oil on canvas, 30 x 23 inches
Est.: $80,000–120,000

Howard Terpning (b. 1927)
Along the Old North Trail (1987)
Oil on canvas, 24 x 30 inches
Est.: $100,000–150,000

Conrad Buff (1886–1975)
Mule Train Through the Minarets (circa 1928)
Oil on canvas, 54 x 78.5 inches
Est.: $60,000–90,000

Carl Rungius (1869–1959)
High Country Monarch (1907)
Oil on canvas, 25 x 34 inches
Est.: $200,000–300,000

Martin Greene (b. 1954)
Lost and Found (2015)
Oil on canvas, 42 x 50 inches
Est.: $150,000–250,000

Eanger Irving Couse (1866–1936)
Tro–E.–N. Uinta (1913)
Oil on canvas, 22 x 18 inches
Est.: $80,000–120,000

Clyde Aspevig (b. 1951)
The Tetons, Wyoming (2009)
Oil on canvas laid on board, 40 x 48 inches
Est.: $80,000–120,000
The Coeur d’Alene Art Auction
Fine Western & American Art

Howard Terpning (b. 1927)

Whiskey Smugglers (1998)
gouache on paper, 26.5 × 40 inches
Est.: $400,000–600,000

William R. Leigh (1866–1955)

A Close Call (1943)
oil on canvas, 35 × 30 inches
Est.: $100,000–1,200,000

Charles M. Russell (1864–1926)

Wild Horses (1900)
watercolor on paper, 20 × 29 inches
Est.: $400,000–600,000

Carl Rungius (1869–1959)

Out of the Canyon
oil on canvas, 28 × 36 inches
Est.: $300,000–500,000

Frederic Remington (1861–1909)

We Have Got the Men and the Cows … (1896) ink wash on paper, 17.75 × 21.5 inches
Est.: $50,000–75,000

Philip R. Goodwin (1881–1935)

In A Tight Corner
oil on canvas laid on board, 24 × 33 inches
Est.: $100,000–150,000

Richard Schmidt (b. 1934)

Alberta Falls, Rocky Mountain National Park
oil on canvas, 30 × 40 inches
Est.: $40,000–60,000

Edward Borein (1872–1945)

Rounding Up a String (1922)
watercolor on paper, 34 × 17.5 inches
Est.: $80,000–120,000

E. William Gollings (1878–1932)

Day Herder (1923)
oil on canvas, 10 × 7 inches
Est.: $50,000–75,000

Edgar Payne (1883–1947)

Arizona Country
oil on canvas, 20 × 24 inches
Est.: $80,000–120,000

Howard Terpning (b. 1927)

The Pipe Holder
oil on board, 30 × 24 inches
Est.: $150,000–250,000

Joseph H. Sharp (1859–1953)

Chief Bull Child – Blackfeet (1903)
oil on canvas, 20 × 22 inches
Est.: $80,000–120,000

A. E. Martin Hennings (1888–1956)

Riders in the Sage
oil on canvas, 23 × 30 inches
Est.: $100,000–150,000

Maynard Dixon (1875–1946)

The Prairie (1915)
oil on canvas, 63 × 78 inches
Est.: $500,000–750,000

Albert Bierstadt (1830–1902)

Wind River Country (circa 1859) oil on paper laid on board, 14 × 19.5 inches
Est.: $60,000–90,000

E. Martin Hennings (1888–1956)

Out of the Canyon
watercolor on paper, 18 × 29 inches
Est.: $80,000–120,000

Philip R. Goodwin (1881–1935)

A Singer
oil on canvas, 28 × 36 inches
Est.: $300,000–500,000

Carl Rungius (1869–1959)

Out of the Canyon
oil on canvas, 28 × 36 inches
Est.: $300,000–500,000

Maynard Dixon (1875–1946)

The Prairie (1915)
oil on canvas, 63 × 78 inches
Est.: $500,000–750,000

The 2017 Coeur d’Alene Art Auction will be held July 29 in Reno, Nevada.
A Latter-Day Ledger Painting Offers Clues To The Past And Present

“Keepers of a Great Nation,” a 2015 painting on the Julius Bien & Company 1883 map “Northern Pacific Railroad, Its Branches and Allied Lines,” offers clues to America’s past and its present. The painting is loaded with symbols placed there by the maker. Oglala Lakota artist Merle Locke, explains Dennis Brining, founder and director of Culturalpatina, a source for extraordinary objects of art from around the world. Locke resides on the Pine Ridge Indian Reservation, a 3½-million-acre expanse straddling South Dakota and Nebraska. As an emerging Lakota artist, Locke hopes to express and reflect his history and culture with better understanding and knowledge for mankind to share in this world. His artwork is his way of keeping the Lakota tradition and culture alive. Brining acquired the painting through the Partnership With Native Americans, a Texas-based not-for-profit organization that provides material aid, educational programs, and community-based services to 60 Native American reservations in 12 states.

Locke says, “Lakota art is in constant motion, very dramatic and always moving. It is very creative, but creativity doesn’t come instantly. Creating creativity is an art that is in itself hard work and that is what Lakota art is about. I classify my artwork as primitive in style but not influenced by the non-Indian world. Depicting historical events must be expressed properly. That in itself requires a great deal of spoken and written research.”

Brining asked Locke what each symbol in this painting represents. According to Locke, the medicine wheel reflects each of the Four Directions—east, south, west, and north—and it is typically represented by a distinctive color, which for some stands for the human races. The four women are the backbone of the Lakota nation. The dragonflies and turtle represent hope and prosperity. In the painting’s upper right corner, a warrior on horseback provides protection for the women.

Seven buffalo symbolize the seven different hands or tribes of the Lakota. The geometric border of blue and white along the painting’s bottom edge represents the prayers the women are saying. The eagle at upper left bears their prayers aloft.

This contemporary interpretation of ledger art derives from a practice begun when the Lakota people were first compelled to live on reservations and adopt the ways of European Americans. They expressed themselves through storytelling and depicted their history on hides and other available materials, including sheets of paper from accounting ledger books provided by the government agents, military officers, traders, and missionaries.

As Locke once said, “Lakota art is very sensitive from my perspective. It can be discouraging and encouraging. Many written history documents have been misinterpreted, but they are always dealt with the same respect and care that Lakota art has. I feel it is my obligation to properly depict the past and present so our future Lakota artists can be encouraged and inspired.” For more information on Culturalpatina and Dennis Brining, purveyor of all things unique and beautiful, visit www.culturalpatina.com.

To Restore or Not Restore? That Is The Big Western Movie Poster Question

By Tony Cirone

Growing up on the East Coast, I was completely consumed with a passion for the West—particularly the exciting world portrayed in the great black and white Western movies and cowboy television dramas. Instead of walking to school alongside my buddies in Hartford, Conn., just a small kid with curly hair, I was, in my head, on my way to one of the fantastic adventures in the Big Little Books or the ten-cent comics of Hopalong Cassidy, Roy Rogers, Gene Autry and other Western stars.

After earning a master’s degree in fine art, I taught art and film at the college level for over four decades. In my personal life, I devoted myself to creating, collecting, buying and selling fine art and Western movie posters, integrating a love of art with my cowboy self.

I became passionate about protecting and preserving the integrity of these works. I am honored to share some of my knowledge here. I have restored hundreds of oil paintings, and have deacidified and removed mold from etchings, engravings and other works on paper. I learned how critical it is to preserve the integrity of the art by choosing the best acid-free materials, as well as selecting glass and Plexiglass that blocks 99 percent of ultraviolet light.

One day many years ago, I came upon a Western movie poster titled “Gene Autry’s Sierra Sue.” It was folded and had tape, stamps, dates and writing in pencil on the back. The poster almost fell apart in my hands. I still have that poster, which marks the beginning of my pursuit of original Western posters.

As I collected, I was constantly troubled by the condition of the early posters. I discovered linen backing. This process of mounting and preserving vintage posters originated in France during the Nineteenth Century. Posters were meant to be returned or exchanged back to the film company but quite often they were merely discarded. This is what makes the earliest posters rare and valuable. Over time these artifacts become stained from the natural acid in the paper pulp, brittle and torn from handling. Exposure to the atmosphere caused them to deteriorate. The tape that is often used to repair tears can stain and be difficult to remove. Dates, notes and stamps are frequently present on the backs of posters.

In the world of fine vintage posters, professional restoration is key in enhancing and maintaining the value of the original. It is important to properly preserve the aesthetic appeal of these works on paper. Our passion for the West lives on in these eye-catching and memory-loaded works of art, so care for them properly.

Owner of Cirone Studios in Windsor, Conn., Tony Cirone, collects, appraises and conserves Western movie posters. He is currently working on a book documenting the lithographic printing process used by the Morgan Lithographic Co. of Cleveland, Ohio to create those stunning early Western movie posters. For more information, visit www.cironestudios.com.

Lara M. Evans Named IAIAs First Associate Dean Of Academics

Institute of American Indian Arts (IAIA) Academic Dean Charlene Teter (Spokan) has announced the appointment of Dr Lara M. Evans as the school’s first associate dean of academics, effective August 7. Evans is an artist, scholar, curator and an enrolled member of the Cherokee Nation. She earned her PhD in art history at the University of New Mexico in 2005, her specialization is within Native American art history in contemporary art. She joined the museum studies department at IAIA in 2012 after eight years as faculty at the Evergreen State College in Olympia, Wash. Since 2015, Evans has also been program director for the IAIA Artist-in-Residence Program, which brings 12 to 14 Native American artists to campus for monthlong residencies each year. Her curatorial projects at the IAIA Museum of Contemporary Native Art have included “Now in the Wilderness: Investigating Native Histories and Visions of the Future,” 2017, and “War Department: Selections from MoCNA’s Permanent Collection,” 2015–16.

The reorganization of the academic division was first brought forward by the IAIA faculty council chair to address issues of growth in IAIA enrollment. The addition of an associate dean who comes from the current faculty addresses succession planning for the dean’s position and provides opportunity for faculty leadership development.

Institute of American Indian Arts is the only college in the nation dedicated to the study of contemporary Native arts in Santa Fe, N.M. It is at 83 A Van Nu Po Road. For additional information, 505-424-2325 or www.iaia.edu.
An Enduring Legacy of Beauty, Heart and Spirit™

EDWARD CURTIS

Twelve of Curtis’ most compelling Goldtone™ images are being offered by Christopher Cardozo Fine Art, exclusively through our online gallery

Visit us at edwardcurtis.com

CHRISTOPHER CARDozo FINE ART

The world’s most trusted source for the work of Edward Curtis

edwardcurtis.com | 612.212.7044
As Fighting Bear Antiques approaches its 40th year in Jackson, Wyo., the firm has seen a lot of changes in both collecting habits and the traditional ways of doing business. With internet exposure — or overexposure, some would say — and the plethora of shopping sites and auctions, owners Terry and Claudia Winchell still take a very hands-on approach to doing business. By having a prominent retail location in a popular tourist destination, they have the opportunity to meet many collectors as well as part-time summer and winter residents interested in furnishing with Western art and antiques. This personal relationship allows the Winchells to introduce their inventory in a personal way. Their long-term relationships with pickers and other dealers, not to mention their reputation for quality offerings, assures they always have fresh inventory of Native American arts, including Navajo textiles; rustic furniture by Makenzowr, Stickley, Old Hickory and others; historic Western art and photography; and vintage Western items such as spurs, saddles and more for sale at their handsome shop. Quality "sells" in the collecting world today, so Fighting Bear Antiques is very selective with its purchases. The days are gone of finding a market for everything antique. Fighting Bear Antiques buys about one-tenth of the items it is offered and endeavors to stay in its field of expertise. The company is user friendly: it delivers for free, ships all purchases itself and provides digital files for collections management. Fighting Bear Antiques can offer services not available on the internet, such as hanging art, custom upholstery and fabrication of art mounts and armatures. Fighting Bear Antiques has a professional wood shop and a metal fabrication ability located at its Jackson warehouse. The current fashion for Midcentury Modern style allows Fighting Bear Antiques the opportunity to introduce regional decorative accessories to complement minimalist interior design approaches. For example, the company has success selling Northwest Coast art and Hopi kachina dolls to collectors of Surrealist art. Andre Breton (1896–1966), the founder of Surrealism, was a great collector of ethnographic art and an inspiration to today’s collectors. As dealers, the Winchells are always intent on educating their buyers, and provide resources to new collectors from their own library. Online bookstores offer other resources, some out of print. The major American Indian artifact exhibitions, which have been traveling to various museums over the last several years, have also introduced many younger patrons to this art. For instance, "Native American Masterpieces from the Charles and Valerie Diker Collection," at New York's Metropolitan Museum of Art earlier this year, substantially raised the profile of American Indian art at home and abroad. Fighting Bear Antiques credits its success to its strong online presence, intertwined with a track record of integrity and customer service. Being quick to adapt to the ever-changing collector base is a key to success in today's antiques business. At 375 South Cache Street in Jackson, Wyo., Fighting Bear Antiques is open 9 am to 6 pm, Monday through Saturday, and Sundays by appointment. The Winchells continue to seek collections and welcome inquiries. Visit them at www.fightingbear.com, email them at store@fightingbear.com or call 307-733-2669.

Fighting Bear, Jackson’s Destination For Western Art And Antiques

Debra Sherman’s Dancing Wolf Gallery

Fine Native American, Cowboy and Folk Art

24295 N. Elbert Road, Elbert, CO 80106
Open: Wed - Sat. 10-5 or by Appointment
303-909-2724
www.dancingwolfgallery.com
While most know John Moran Auctioneers of Monrovia, Calif., for its track record in selling California and American paintings, the company has been expanding its reach into the Western and Native American art markets in recent years. Last year, Moran's introduced its Art of the American West auction sessions, featuring Native American weavings, pottery, basketry and jewelry; Western-genre paintings and bronzes; and Arts and Crafts furniture, metalwork and art pottery.

Catering to collectors, Moran's is planning two Art of the American West auction sessions per year, one in the spring and one in the fall. Items are offered with estimates ranging from $500 to the six figures. The inclusion of price-points under $2,000 is in part an effort to appeal not only to the established collector, but to aesthetically minded buyers and burgeoning Western-genre enthusiasts alike. Earlier this year, Moran's offered an Art of the American West catalog as part of a three-session auction on April 25. The Western sale took place alongside the firm's Traditional Collector and Twentieth Century and Contemporary Design sessions.

Comprising 76 lots, the April Art of the American West session was small but packed a punch. The top lot was a handsome Navajo First Phase Ute-style chief's blanket dating to the mid-Nineteenth Century that realized $132,000 ($100/200,000). In June 2012, Moran's sold a masterful example of a First Phase Navajo blanket for $1.8 million. Since that 2012 sale, Moran's has found success with a number of Nineteenth Century Navajo weavings, among them a classic period Second Phase weaving which earned an exceptional $92,250 in February 2016. Western-genre paintings have consistently brought robust prices over the last few years, with particularly strong prices achieved throughout 2016 for works consigned from the Paso Robles, Calif., estate of Phoebe Hearst Cooke. One crowd favorite was Sedona artist James Elwood Reynolds (1926–2010) "Coyotes and Cactus," which realized $36,000 ($18/22,000). In October of last year, Moran's offered a work by Albert Bierstadt (1830–1902), "El Capitan, Yosemite," depicting wildlife in an untouched Merced River landscape, was painted by the artist after his second trip west in 1863. Conservatively assigned a $40/60,000 estimate, the painting achieved an astounding $660,000. The April sale featured art by contemporary Western painter Howard Rogers (b 1932), Lon Megargee (1883–1960) and Roy Andersen (b 1930), whose diminutive work "The Backtrail" achieved $2,700. While consignments are still being invited, buyers can expect a wide selection of Western paintings and prints to be offered at Moran's November 14 Art of the American West auction. Highlights from the November sale include a classic Nineteenth Century Second-Phase chief's blanket, important turn-of-the-century Germantown weavings and a selection of Stickley furniture gathered from private collections across Southern California. For additional information on John Moran Auctioneers or to see upcoming highlights, visit www.johnmoran.com, email info@johnmoran.com or call 626-793-1833.
July 29 marks the 32nd anniversary of the Coeur d’Alene Art Auction, which will be conducted this year at the Grand Sierra Resort, 2500 East 2nd Street in Reno, Nev. With more than $2.30 million in sales through the last ten years, the auction has been hailed as "The Biggest and Most Successful Auction of Western Art" by the Wall Street Journal and was named "The Most Important Annual Event for Collectors of Western Art" by The New York Times. Once again, the Coeur d’Alene Art Auction is certain to be the high point of the auction world.

The Coeur d’Alene Art Auction is known for selling the highest quality Western paintings and sculpture from historical and contemporary artists, and this year’s sale will be no exception.

The auction features more than 15 works by the Western master Charles M. Russell. Headlining the offerings is "Wild Horses" ($400,000/600,000), the 1900 watercolor has been in a private family collection for more than 100 years. Other featured works include "Montana Winter" ($100,000/150,000), "The Storm" ($80,000/120,000) and rare sculptures, including "Medicine Whip" ($200,000/300,000).

All eyes will be on what may be the most spectacular work by William R. Leigh ever to come to auction. "A Close Call" features all the high-action Leigh is known for and, being fresh to the market, is expected to bring $800,000-$1.2 million.

A masterful oil by Thomas Moran will be one of the headliners with his “The Rio Virgin, Southern Utah” ($600,000/900,000). Coming fresh out of a private collection, the painting is sure to cause fireworks in the salesroom. Other important historical Western works include "The Prairie," a stunning large-scale oil by Carl Rungius ($400,000/600,000) and rare sculptures, including "Medicine Whip" ($200,000/300,000).

Contemporary Western masters make up a large portion of the auction and will be headlined by Howard Terpning’s "Whisky Snugglers" ($400,000/600,000). The painting won the Gold Medal in the 1998 Cowboy Artists of America show and has remained in the original owner’s collection since. It will be joined by other Terpning paintings, such as "The Pipe Holder" ($150,000/250,000) and "Along the Old North Trail" ($100,000/150,000).

Other important contemporary works include "Lost and Found" ($150,000/250,000) by Martin Greile; "US Dragoons in Texas," 1851 ($800,000/1,200,000) by Tom Lovell; "Below Ronda" ($600,000/900,000) by Clark Hulings; Clyde Aspevig’s "The Tetons, Wyoming" ($800,000/1,200,000); "Alberta Falls" by Richard Schmid, ($600,000/900,000) and a masterpiece by Frank McCarthy, "The Long Knives" ($600,000/900,000).

Wildlife and sporting paintings will be headlined by a large, one-owner collection of works by David Shepherd, many of which were commissioned by the owner, an avid African big-game hunter. Featured works include "Elephant Heaven" and "Angry Elephants" ($500,000/750,000 each) and "Black Rhino and Ant Hill" ($300,000/500,000).

These will be joined by other fine paintings, such as Philip R. Goodwin’s "Moose Hunter" ($100,000/150,000); "The Predator" by Bob Kuhn, ($600,000/900,000); "Setters on Point" by Edmund Orthaus ($300,000/500,000) and "Karmai Bears" ($300,000/500,000) by Ken Carlson.

Taos artists will be well represented with works, such as Walter Ufer "A Singer" ($150,000/250,000); Joseph Henry Sharp’s "Chief Bull Child – Blackfeet" ($800,000/1,200,000) and "Firelight Drummer" ($600,000/900,000); a magnificent Eanger Irving Couse "Tu-E-Na, Chieftain" ($800,000/1,200,000); E. MartinHenninger’s "Riders in the Sage" ($100,000/150,000) and Ernest Blumenschein’s "Mountain Landscape" ($300,000/500,000).

Unique to the sale this year will be a collection of 26 wagons created by Brian Ford, son of the late artist Dale Ford. The collection began as a collaboration between the two artists and enjoy a level of detail not seen in previous works. Almost every type of Western wagon is represented. Taking more than three years to complete, it is truly a once-in-a-lifetime collection.

For additional information, www.cdaartauction.com or 208-772-9009.
Leanin’ Tree Museum Collection Headed To The Block In January 2018

Scottsdale Art Auction is proud to have been selected to host the sale of the Leanin’ Tree Museum of Western Art collection on Friday and Saturday, January 19 and 20, at its auction gallery in Arizona. The auction will feature more than 500 works, including Western, landscape and wildlife paintings, as well as numerous monumental sculptures of American Western and wildlife subjects.

While serving in the European Theater during World War II, young Ed Trumble witnessed firsthand the simple power of a greeting card. He saw and felt how hearing your name at mail call and being handed a card from the mailbag could lift the spirits of a soldier far from home. After the war, Trumble and co-founder Bob Lorenz decided to make a life and career out of the heartfelt and humorous images and messages that family and friends send to say they are thinking of one another. In 1949, they founded Leanin’ Tree in Boulder, Colo. The business thrives as a family operation to this day.

The Leanin’ Tree Museum grew out of Trumble’s personal passion for the art of the American West. As his own collection grew, Trumble built a museum to house it and make it available to the public. Of the museum, Trumble says, “The gratitude I feel for those who have loved the art I have loved cannot be fully expressed. And because the Leanin’ Tree Museum has been my lifelong project, I care deeply about seeing the collection come full circle as it finds new loving homes with the next generation of families, collectors and museums.”

Among the hundreds of fine artworks that will be on offer are magnificent atmospheric oils by Gerard Curtis Delano, figurative masterpieces by Frank McCarthy, nostalgic views by G. Harvey, dramatic paintings by Kenneth Riley and Martin Grele, as well as scenes of Western life by noted Cowboy Artists of America painters such as Charlie Dye, Joe Beeler and Melvin Warren. Elegant sculptures by Allan Houser and George Carlson, wildlife masterworks by Bob Kuhn and John Clymer, and many original paintings that became legendary Leanin’ Tree greeting cards will also be for sale. Many of these works will be offered for sale for the first time.

The Scottsdale Art Auction is held in a state-of-the-art, 10,000-square-foot gallery showroom. All the works in the auction will be on view for two weeks prior to the sale date. Knowledgeable and experienced auction staff will be on hand to assist bidders, provide condition reports and expedite shipping after the sale. Full color catalogs will be available and every lot will be on view at Scottsdale Art Auction’s website, www.scottsdaleartauction.com. The Leanin’ Tree Auction also has its own dedicated website, www.leanintreemuseumauction.com. Founded by Michael Frost of J.N. Bartfield Galleries, Jack A. Morris Jr of Morris & Whiteside Galleries and Brad Richardson of Legacy Gallery, Scottsdale Art Auction is at 7176 Main Street, Scottsdale, Ariz.

Homage, Squared
Loan Show Looks At Cross-Cultural Theme

Organized by Mark Sublette Medicine Man Gallery of Tucson and Santa Fe, the display pairs 25 Navajo rugs and blankets woven between 1870 and 1950 with a series of Modern artworks incorporating polygon design and complex color interactions. The textiles, most of them nontraditional Navajo designs, focus on minimalist composition and artistic color play. Made by Native women, the weavings predate the East Coast Modernist art scene of the 1940s through 1960s. Highlights include vintage prints by Josef Albers (1988–1976) and a painting by Jorge Fick (1932–2004), a New Mexican abstractionist who, like Albers, had ties to Black Mountain College in North Carolina.

In the same venue, the Museum of International Folk Art is mounting the pop-up exhibit “The World in New Mexico, New Mexico in the World,” spotlighting the diversity of the museum's collections, from a Miao Chinese crown to contemporary art and the start of the impressive Copper Culture collection of Roger "Buzzy" Mussatti. Quality is the key word when referring to artifacts chosen by Sorgenfrei for his personal collection. He was especially partial to birdstones and had assembled arguably the world’s finest collection at the time of his death. This was on full display in Cowan's spring auction when the first part of the collection realized nearly $450,000 on just 90 lots. Part two features more birdstones from the famed collector as well as Prehistoric blades, axes and other tools. Although also from Prehistoric times, the Mussatti collection is very different from Sorgenfrei's. While Sorgenfrei collected almost exclusively stone pieces, Mussatti favored artifacts from the Copper Culture (4000–1000 BCE). The collection features bird darts, spear points, ulu blades, gorgets and various tools used for hunting and fishing. An avid outdoorsman, Mussatti unearthed most of the pieces himself in the Upper Peninsula of Michigan.

The auction also features two early Native American blankets in exceptional condition. A circa 1860 Navajo Third Phase blanket that once belonged to Don Bennett of Agoura Hills, Calif., is expected to bring between $30,000 and $40,000. Bennett founded the Don Bennett Invitational Antique Indian Art Show in Santa Fe, N.M., precursor to the current Whitehawk Antique Indian and Ethnographic Art Show.

Prehistoric Pieces To Highlight Cowan's September Indian & Western Auction

Building on its record-breaking spring sale, Cowan's Auctions will again feature Prehistoric pieces in its fall American Indian & Western Art Auction scheduled for September 23. Included in the sale are two prominent Prehistoric collections: part two of the Jan W. Sorgenfrei collection of Prehistoric art and the start of the impressive Copper Culture collection of Roger "Buzzy" Mussatti.

The auction also features two early Native American blankets in exceptional condition. A circa 1860 Navajo Third Phase blanket that once belonged to Don Bennett of Agoura Hills, Calif., is expected to bring between $30,000 and $40,000. Bennett founded the Don Bennett Invitational Antique Indian Art Show in Santa Fe, N.M., precursor to the current Whitehawk Antique Indian and Ethnographic Art Show.

The other blanket expected to do well is a Navajo classic serape, circa 1850, with an estimated sale price of between $25,000 and $35,000. In addition to its excellent condition, what makes this particular blanket desirable is its unusual field. While the vast majority of Navajo serapes have a red field, this piece features a white field with red and blue accents.

Other sale highlights include pottery from the personal collection of Dwight Lannon, one of the foremost experts on Native American ceramics. A Zuni Kiapkua olla with crows from his collection should fetch between $15,000 and $25,000, while a Santa Ana pottery olla is expected to hammer for between $8,000 and $10,000.

Cowan's American Indian & Western Art live salesroom auction will be Saturday, September 23, in Cowan's Cincinnati salesroom. A preview is planned for Friday, September 22. For information, www.cowans.com.
Painting Red Rocks County, Past and Present
Booth Western Art Museum
Carterville
www.boothmuseum.org
To October 22
Into the Future: Culture Power in Native American Art
Metropolitan Museum of Art and Indian Arts
Santa Fe
www.indianartandsociety.org
To October 22
Ansel Adams: The Masterworks
Booth Western Art Museum
Carterville
www.boothmuseum.org
“Having their Picture Took”: Western Portrait Photography Then and Now
Desert Caballeros Western Museum
Wickenburg
www.westernmuseum.org
November 3–July 15, 2018
Ava Towrah: Pueblo Painter and MetalSmith
Heard Museum
Phoenix
www.heard.org
To November 5
Spirit of Creation: Works on Paper by Native American Artists
Albuquerque Museum
Albuquerque
www.albuquerque.org
To November 6–January 6, 2019
Transforming Native Art in Light and Sound
National Museum of the American Indian
New York City
www.nmai.si.edu
To November 15
Maryhill Favorites: The Western Experience
Maryhill Museum of Art
Goldendale
www.maryhill.org
December 23–January 20, 2019
Likeways of the Southern Athabaskans: Museum of Indian Arts and Culture
Santa Fe
www.indianartandsociety.org
To December 23
To Honor The Plains Nations
Binghamton
www.thebriart.com
To December 31
Jody Narayan: Revealing Joy
Museum of Indian Arts and Culture
Santa Fe
www.indianartandsociety.org
Grand Canyon Grand Tour
Western Spirit, Scottsdale’s Museum of the West
Scottsdale
www.scottsdalemuseum.org
Edward S. Curtis Among the Reawak
Fenimore Art Museum
Cooperstown
www.fenimoreartmuseum.org
Dewi: Beauty: Native Americans at Home
Fenimore Art Museum
Cooperstown
www.fenimoreartmuseum.org
Over the Edge: Fred Harvey at the Grand Canyon and in the Great Southwest
Heard Museum
Phoenix
www.heard.org
Raven’s Many Gifts: Native Art of the Northwest Coast
Peabody Essex Museum
Salem
www.pem.org
Creating the Modern Southwest
Glorieta Museum
Tuba City
www.glorieta.org
Follow The North Star: Ute Art from the Collection of Estrellita and Yousuf Karsh
Museum of Fine Arts
Boston
www.mfa.org
To January 2, 2018
Frederic Remington at The Met
Metropolitan Museum of Art
New York City
www.metmuseum.org
To January 7, 2018
J. Willard Huntington: Frank Buffalo Hyde Museum of Indian Arts and Culture
Santa Fe
www.indianartandsociety.org
To January 31, 2018
Cody to the World: Celebrating 100 Years at the Buffalo Bill Center of the West
Cody
www.centerofthewest.org
To January 8, 2019
Kunstlorr: A Koinmat Family Portrait
National Museum of the American Indian
New York City
www.nmai.si.edu
February 3–June 17, 2018
Kay Hardesty: Stick: An American Indian Monticar Art Museum
Monticar
www.monticlarartmuseum.org
February 10–March 25, 2018
Masters of the American West
Autry Museum
Los Angeles
Preview July 28
February 24–September 2, 2018
Hans Meyer-Kassel, Artist of Nevada
Nevada Museum of Art
Reno
www.nevadaart.org
To April 1, 2018
Cowboys & Indians: The Early Art of Tom Ronan
Fenimore Art Museum
Cazenovia
www.fenimoreartmuseum.org
To April 15, 2018
Birds: A Universe of Meaning
Wheelwright Museum of the American Indian
Santa Fe
www.wheelwright.org
June 2, 2018–October 14, 2018
American Jewelry from New Mexico
Albuquerque Museum
Albuquerque
www.albuquerque.org
June 8, 2018–September 30, 2018
Robert Benton: With America a Changing West
Buffalo Bill Center of the West
Cody
www.centerofthewest.org
SHOWS AND MARKETS
July 29–30
66th Annual Traditional Spanish Market
Preview August 18
Spanish Colonial Arts Society
Santa Fe
www.spanishcolonial.org
August 11–13
Objects of Art Santa Fe
Preview August 10
Kim Martindale and John Morris
Santa Fe
www.objectsofsantafe.com
August 16–18
The Antique American Indian Art Show
Preview August 15
Kim Martindale and John Morris
Santa Fe
www.antiquesofsantafe.com
August 19–20
98th Santa Fe Indian Market
Preview August 18
SWAIA
www.swaia.org
September 8–October 8
Quest For The West Art Show and Sale
Opening Weekend September 8–9
Eiteljorg Museum of American Indians and Western Art
Indianapolis
www.eiteljorg.org
September 17–January 15, 2018
9th Annual Grand Canyon Cabotage of Art
Grand Canyon Association
Grand Canyon
www.grandcanyon.org
September 20, 2017–January 20, 2018
High Noon Show
Brian Label’s Old West Events
Vegas
www.oldwestevents.com
March 3–4, 2018
Indian Fair & Market
Heard Museum Guild
Best of Show Reception March 2
Phoenix
www.heard.org
To March 17–18, 2018
The Russell Exhibition and Sale
C.M. Russell Museum
Great Falls
www.cmrussell.org
March 25–May 13, 2018
Cowgirl Upl Art from the Other Half of the West
Desert Caballeros Western Museum
Wickenburg
www.westernmuseum.org
Summer 2018
Old West Show
Brian Label’s Old West Events
www.oldwestevents.com
Auctions
August 17–18
42nd Annual Benefit Auction
Wheelwright Museum of the American Indian
Santa Fe
www.wheelwright.org
August 19
Live Auction & Gala
Santa Fe Indian Market
Santa Fe
www.swaia.org
Fall 2017
The Potsmack Company
Native American and Western Art
Alexandria
www.potsmackcompany.com
American Indian and Western Art including part two of the Jan W. Sorgenfrei Collection of Prehistoric American Indian Art
Cowan’s
www.cowanauctions.com
November 5
Arts of the American West
Leslie Hindman Auctioneers
Denver
www.lesliehindman.com
November 14
Art of the American West
John Moros Auctioneers
Monrovia
www.johnmoros.com
January 19–20, 2018
Lewin’ Tree Museum Collection Scuttodale Art Auction
Scottsdale
www.scottsdaleartauction.com
January 20, 2018
Brian Label’s High Noon Auction
Mesa
www.oldwestevents.com
April 2018
Art of the American West
John Moros Auctioneers
Monrovia
www.johnmoros.com
April 7, 2018
Western, Wildlife and Sporting Art
Aldridge Art Auction Scottsdale Art Auction
Scottsdale
www.scottsdaleartauction.com
Summer 2018
Brian Label’s Old West Auction
www.oldwestevents.com
Private Dealers, Galleries & Services
Chesapeake Carasco Fine Art
The leading source for the artwork of Edward S. Curtis.
www.edwardcurtis.com
Cirone Studios
Western movie posters bought, sold, appraised and conserved.
www.cironestudios.com
Dancing Wolf Gallery
Specializing in fine Native American art from Alaska to Tierra Del Fuego.
www.dancingwolfgallery.com
Fighting Bear Antiques
Offering fine Western antiques, Native American art and furniture for camp and lodge.
www.fightingbear.com
Toby Herbst Antiques
www.tobyherbst.com
OBJECTS OF ART SHOWS

UPCOMING SHOWS

AUG 10-13, 2017
EL MUSEO, SANTA FE, NM

AUG 15-18, 2017
EL MUSEO, SANTA FE, NM

OCT 6-8, 2017
THE REEF, LOS ANGELES, CA

JAN 10-14, 2018
LA CONVENTION CENTER, LOS ANGELES, CA

FEB 8-11, 2018
FORT MASON CENTER, SAN FRANCISCO, CA

FEB 17-18, 2018
MARIN CENTER, SAN RAFAEL, CA

ObjectsOfArtShows.com