Take a glimpse into world history, as told through over 20,000 antique prints of all kinds in this one final auction. Don't miss this institutions last glance at the past.

All the prints are from the actual archives of the famed gallery, which was at the forefront of the Manhattan art world for decades, dating back to 1928. In the mid-1960's, building on their collaboration with Salvador Dali, the Phyllis Lucas Gallery becoming the first North American publisher of his lithographs and published 26 editions of his images, including the extraordinary Lucas Collection of Dali Originals, published between 1965 and 1974. Now you can take a glance inside the storied New York art world from all those years.

After hosting the Phyllis Lucas Gallery auction Part One and Part Two earlier this year, Roland Auction saves the best for last, now grouping many lots together with multiple pieces from the vast archives for this not to be missed auction opportunity.
